Celebrating Women's History Month

Dear TCSPP Community,

This week marks the beginning of Women's History Month, an opportunity for us to recognize the countless accomplishments of the brave women who inspire us every day to make further progress toward gender equity.

We are indebted to the remarkable women who carved new paths to serve those around them, all in the face of deep discrimination. These women were guided by the same mission as guides us today at The Chicago School—a commitment to innovative support for communities in need.

I am proud of how we carry forward the legacies of these women at our university today. Our university is full of women—students, faculty, and staff—who I know will be the ones to break the cycles of gender inequity, through courageous leadership and empathetic service to others.

This month, I hope that you take time to appreciate the women in your own life who have helped you get to where you are today. We owe a great deal of thanks to the women in our professional and personal lives who have supported us at every turn and celebrated our successes as change agents and as people.

Warm regards,

Michele
